

MUST FIND GEMS OR LIVE ALWAYS IN LUDLOW JAIL

Solomon Urbach's Story of Being Robbed on a Train Deemed Incredible.

Solomon Urbach, a diamond dealer, claiming to be kidnapped one of the few civil prisoners in Ludlow Street Jail, is likely to spend the remainder of his life behind the bars unless he decides to comply with the order of Judge Holt, of the United States District Court, directing the surrender of jewels worth $30,000 to Job E. Hodges, who as receiver represents the creditors.

Urbach, who has been locked up since Oct. 28, declares that he is unable to restore the diamonds he obtained on credit because they were stolen from him on a yellow white he was riding in a sleeping car between this city and Baltimore on Sept. 10, 1907.

George W. Gallinger, representing Urbach, recently appeared for his client's release from Ludlow Street Jail, asserting that the man's family, living at No. 211 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street, was in distress. In order to obtain his release, the representative of the creditors that last summer Urbach, then being supplied with funds, received a check for his wife and family.

Hays and Hodges, asking for Urbach's detention, made this statement: "Unless a bankrupt can be put in the hands of the court in the district where he is domiciled, he cannot be released from his possession. The bankruptcy law, so far as diamond merchants are concerned, will become a refuge and haven for dishonest men."

"I cannot find any other explanation than that the story of the loss is too incredible and improbable to be true."

Refusing to let Urbach out of jail, Judge Holt, who heard the argument and arguments, wrote this memorandum: "I have gone over the facts in this case. They are perfectly conclusive. The bankrupt's statement of property, the conversion of it into cash, the purchase of the diamonds, the receipt of the same, the fact that the diamonds were not found, all these facts, taken together, lead to the conclusion that the diamonds were stolen from him. I am sorry for his wife and children, but I cannot release him. Let him produce the property or stay in jail until he can produce restitution to his creditors."

ABUSED AT HOME, RAN AWAY TO BE NEAR HER FIANCE

Maud Crooke, fifteen years old, who ran away from her home in Washington, told Justice Fleming in the Children's Court in Brooklyn today a story of romance and love at first sight that made him refuse to send her home with her father until a more thorough investigation of her case is made.

According to Maud, who is unusually large for her age, she stood a lot of abuse from her family, and was willing to stand it and continue working for them until she fell in love. Then all was off so far as home and mother was concerned. She was immediately fired with a resolve that ended her marriage and she packed her kit and ran away to Brooklyn to be near her fiancé.

Detectives Macauley and Celestine found Maud last night. She has been working since Tuesday, when she arrived in New York, as a maid for Mrs.

Hayes, No. 349 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, who is very much attached to her and says she will give her a home when her troubles are over. "They treated me as mean as they could at home," said Maud. "I was not wanted, and they beat and abused me and showed partiality to my younger brother and sister. I worked for a year and a half in a restaurant and took home my share every week, but they always told me I was just an expense to them."

"Then, one day, I saw Chesley and I fell in love right away. He was in a window of the Marine Hospital recovering from sickness, and every morning for a week we would smile at each other as I went to work. Then one day he threw me a note and asked me to meet him. I did and at the end of another week we were engaged. He has only fourteen months to serve with the Marine Corps, and then we are going to get married and go to Ohio, where he has a good job waiting for him. His father is a Methodist minister. Just before the flying will decide the case April 22."

The father is a street car conductor in Washington, and declared that the girl had been treated badly. "I am sure," said the father, "that my daughter is a good girl and that she would run away again and be married."

More proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has secured the position for her with Mrs. Hayes, who went to work as soon as she reached New York. She begged her father to send her anywhere but home, and said if she were sent home she would run away again and be married.

"I was a great sufferer from female troubles, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health in three months, after my physician declared that an operation was absolutely necessary."

Mrs. Alvina Spiering, of 151 Cleybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered from female troubles, a tumor and much inflammation. Two of the best doctors in Chicago decided that an operation was necessary to save my life. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely cured me without an operation."
